The teacher in a New York slum Sunday-school was instructing the kids in a few side questions, with pictures to match, says the Detroit Free Press.
"Now, Johnny," she said to a kid, as she held up the picture of a royal Bengal tiger, "what is that?"
Johnny took one squint at it.
"Dat's Tammany," he replied, with pride and confidence.
The teacher frowned.
"No." she said. "that's a tiger. Do you know what a tiger is?"
He shook his head.
"It's a flerce animal." she explained, "that loves to eat up tender little boys like you."

"Hully gee!" he exclaimed, "you bet it don't want to eat me."
"Come off." contended Johnny. "I wouldn't be in it a minute if it likes dat kind; my mudder says I'm de toughest kid on de block," and Johnny settled back and called for "de nex."
